

(Photo 1).

HISTORY OF SETTLEMENT IN THE MINNESOTA RIVER VALLEY

Many generations of Native Americans have called the Minnesota River Valley home – relying on the valley’s rich resources for sustenance, shelter and transportation. Archaeological sites have been discovered in Bloomington spanning each of the three main traditions or periods of Native American presence in the valley. Specifically, the Dakota Indians had numerous villages in the Bloomington area all of which were greatly affected by the arrival of white European explorers and settlers.

European exploration of the Upper Mississippi River basin began in 1673 when French explorers Louis Joliet and Jacques Marquette reached the river near what is now Prairie du Chien, Wisconsin. Over the next 100 years the Mississippi River basin and its tributaries including the Minnesota River were explored by French fur traders as well as other European explorers who were beginning to make their way into the American West. In 1805, the Minnesota River Valley, was officially ceded to the U.S. government via the Louisiana Purchase. As a result, more white settlers were attracted to the region. The U.S. government encouraged this settlement and fortified the area with strategic defenses, including Fort Snelling. With the completion of the Fort in 1825, the Minnesota River became a very important strategic waterway to the West.

Throughout this time period relations between white settlers and Native Americans were contentious and often violent. Through a series of questionable treaties, such as Treaty Traverse des Sioux, the U.S. government took control of almost all of the Native American land in the river valley. This culminated in the U.S. Dakota War of 1862 – a bloody six week war between the U.S. government and several bands of Dakota. The war ended with a mass execution of 38 Dakota men on December 26, 1862, in Mankato, Minnesota and the majority of the Dakota people were exiled from the state.

Meanwhile, white settlers continued to flood into the lower Minnesota River Valley, establishing cities and towns. These settlers also relied on the rich resources of the Valley. Specifically, the river served as an important transportation artery for the settlers. Steamboats were the primary means by which goods were moved between the newly established Minnesota River cities until the expansion of railroads into the area in the 1860’s and 70’s.

Throughout the 20th century the river transitioned from a transportation corridor into a recreation area enjoyed by the people of the Twin Cities. Prior to a large portion of the valley gaining Federal Refuge status in 1976, the area was utilized for other purposes, including housing duck hunting camps for area hunters. Today, walkers, bikers and birders are the primary users of the Refuge and City owned land in the valley.

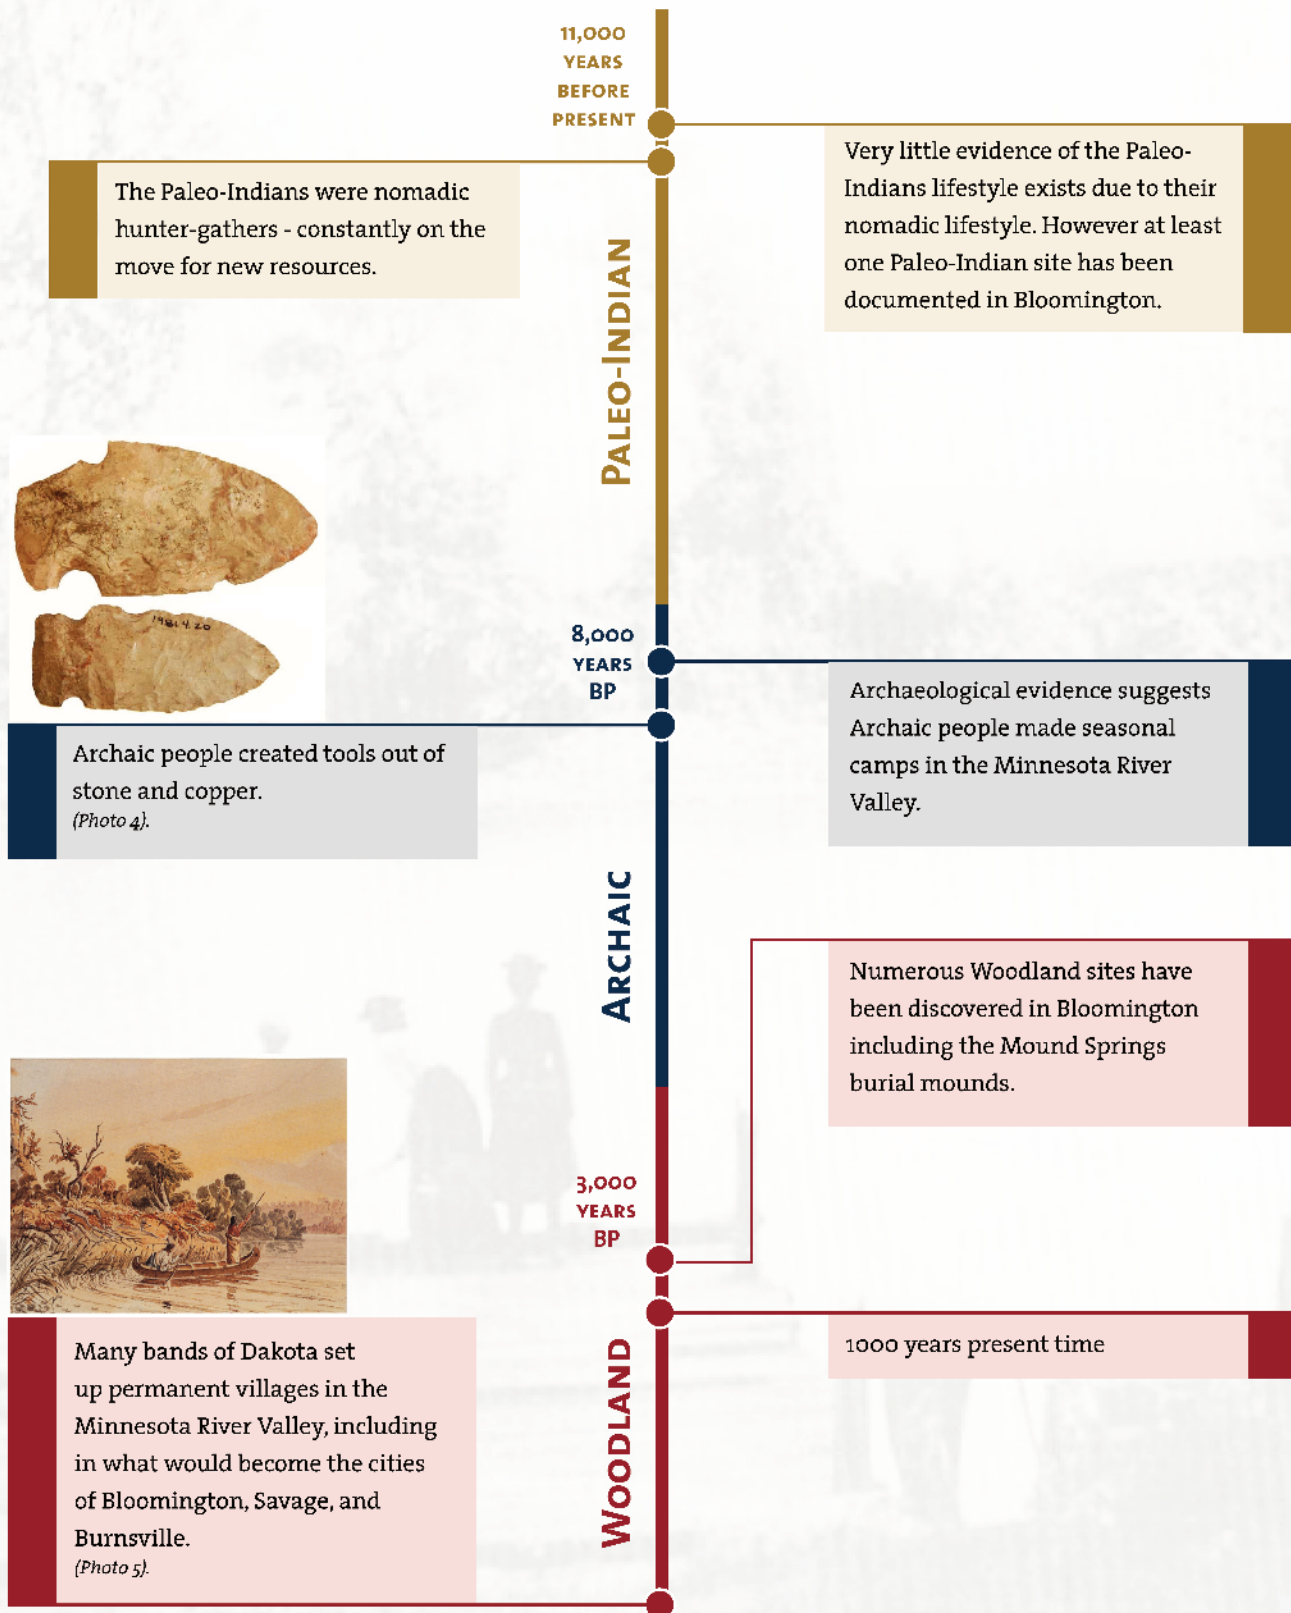

(Photo 2).

In 1834 Gideon Pond and his brother Samuel came to Minnesota to teach Christianity to the Dakota. The Ponds received government permission to establish a mission school near Lake Calhoun (current Minneapolis), where Chief Cloud Man’s band of Dakota spent their summers. Beginning in 1839, conflicts between the Dakota and Ojibwe prompted Cloud Man to move his village to a spot near the Minnesota River in present day Bloomington. The village was one of several in the area, including the villages of Black Dog (Burnsville) Shakpe (Shakopee), and others. Gideon Pond moved to join them in 1843, establishing the Oak Grove Mission that would operate until 1852. Today, this site is one of three Bloomington properties that is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

PRE-SETTLEMENT

Archaeological sites have been discovered in Bloomington spanning each of the three main traditions or periods of Native American presence in the valley: Paleo-Indian, Archaic, and Woodland.

EUROPEAN SETTLEMENT

The Minnesota River Valley in Bloomington has been home to human beings for millennia. Many generations of Native Americans have called the Minnesota River Valley home while European settlement of the Minnesota River Valley began in the late 1600s. Since that time period, the human population in the river valley has continued to grow.

French explorers Louis Joliet and Jacques Marquette reach the upper portion of the Mississippi River. (Photo 3).

1673

1600

1700

1800

The Lower Minnesota River is acquired by the U.S. Government as part of the Louisiana Purchase.

1805

U.S. government takes control of 100,000 acres of Dakota land at the intersection of the Mississippi and Minnesota Rivers via disputed treaty negotiations.

1805

Treaty Traverse des Sioux

1851

State of Minnesota is admitted into the Union.

1858

Township of Bloomington is established.

1858

War Department begins building a chain of forts between Lake Michigan and the Missouri River, including Fort Snelling.

1815

Gideon Pond establishes Oak Grove Mission near Chief Cloud Man's village. (Photo 8).

1852

U.S. Dakota War

1862

Bloomington Ferry opens.

1849

Construction of Fort Snelling is completed. (Photo 9).

1825

Peter and Louisa Quinn, Bloomington's first white settlers, are sent by the government to teach farming methods to the Dakota Indians living near Fort Snelling.

1843

Chief Cloud Man, a Dakota chief, moves his village to a spot near the Minnesota River in present day Bloomington.

1839

First Bloomington Ferry Bridge is constructed. (Photo 11).

1889

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Services is established within the U.S. Department of Interior

1940

Minnesota Valley National Wildlife Refuge is created. (Photo 7).

1976

Memorandum of Understanding between the City of Bloomington and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is signed, governing shared responsibilities in the Minnesota River Valley

1998

City of Bloomington incorporated

1960

Dan Patch Railroad bridge is constructed

1908

New Cedar Avenue bridge is constructed

1979

Bass Ponds are created

1920

Original Cedar Avenue bridge is constructed. (Photo 10).

1920

Rehabilitation of Old Cedar Avenue bridge begins.

2015

Planned opening of the Bloomington section of the Minnesota River Valley Trail.

2017

References

- ¹ Steamboat on the Minnesota River. Photo courtesy of Bloomington Historical Society.
- ² Gideon Pond House. Photo courtesy of Bloomington Historical Society.
- ³ Seth Eastman illustration.
- ⁴ Guy Gibbon and Scott F. Anfinson. Minnesota Archaeology: The First 13,000 Years. Figure 8.1.
- ⁵ Fur traders in Canada 1777. William Faden, http://common.wikimeida.org/wiki/File:Fur_traders_in_canada_1777.jpg, 1777.
- ⁶ Seth Eastman illustration.
- ⁷ A.N. Author Title. Name, 2000.
- ⁸ Gideon Pond. Photo courtesy of Bloomington Historical Society.
- ⁹ Fort Snelling. Photo courtesy of Bloomington Historical Society.
- ¹⁰ Old Cedar Avenue bridge. Photo courtesy of the City of Bloomington.
- ¹¹ Bloomington Ferry. Photo courtesy of Bloomington Historical Society.